Problem: The Visit Is Short. The Information Isn't.

10.1 billion

healthcare visits in China in 2024, national statistics

~3 min

average consultation after ~40 min of waiting, in a study of one large Chinese hospital

11,959 outpatients

What Patients Struggle With Before and After the Visit

BEFORE THE VISIT

“History-taking takes time. In short outpatient visits, important details, such as symptom progression, medications, exposure history, and family history, can be missed.”

Nurse + patient perspective, translated and condensed from interview notes

AFTER THE VISIT

“I had the prescription, but I still wanted to know why this medication was chosen, why I needed it for this long, what risks I should watch for, and what the test was for.”

Patient with a chronic condition · translated

Before the visit, the full story is hard to pass on. After it, the plan is hard to understand. A few minutes leaves little room for either.

VisitSmoothie

Solution

VisitSmoothie: one continuous journey around the outpatient visit

An agentic companion that helps patients communicate before the visit and understand what comes after

BEFORE THE VISIT

A history-aware pre-visit agent that guides patients to articulate their symptoms and generates a brief for the doctor.

AFTER THE VISIT

A clear Clinical Plan that carries the visit forward, with personalized explanation depth based on how much the patient wants to understand.

How we measure better care

Do patients feel better able to communicate their concerns and more satisfied with the visit?

Understanding & Confidence

Do patients understand their treatment plan and feel confident about what to do next?

Adherence & Follow-through

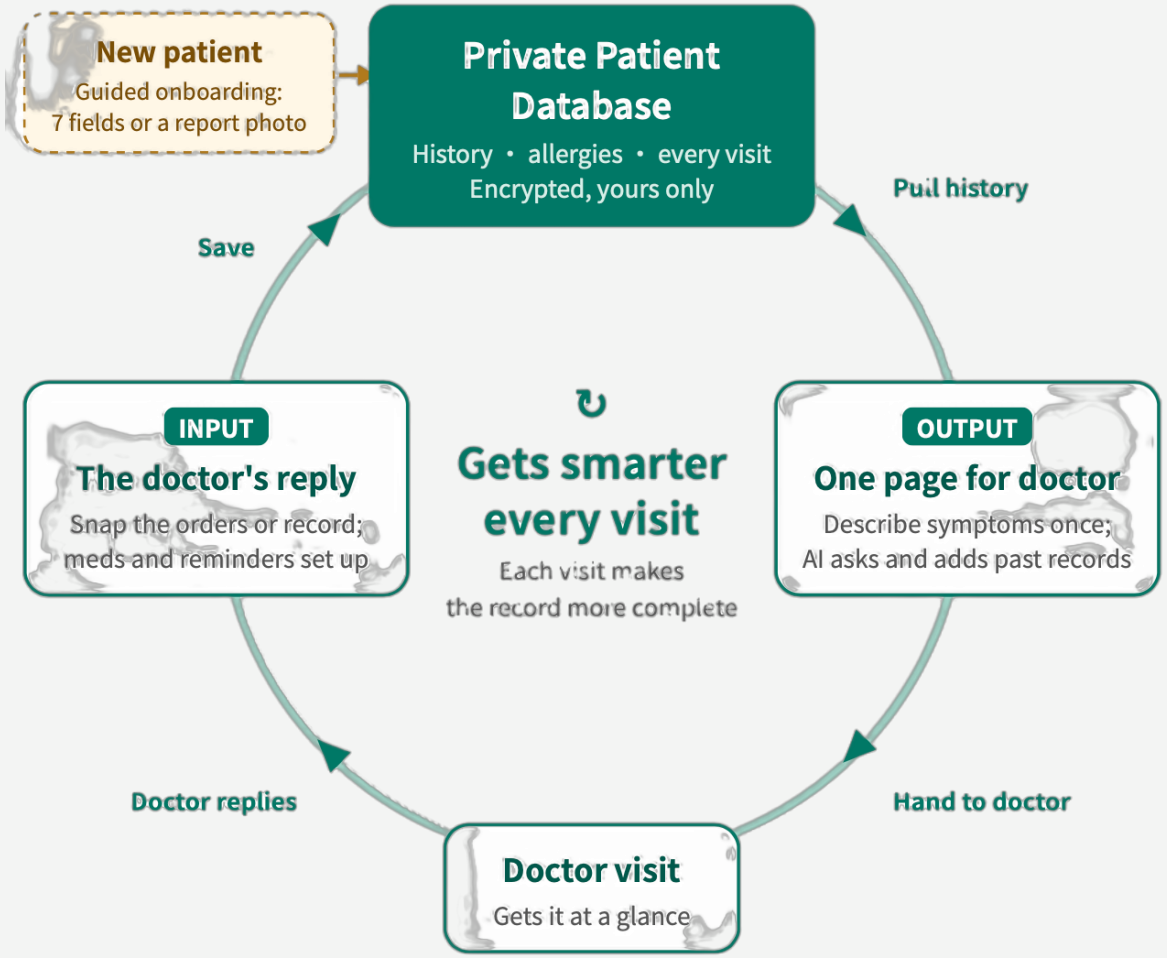

Do patients follow medications, tests and follow-up plans more consistently?

Patient Outcomes

Over time, do patients report better symptom and health outcomes?
